

Kenneth R. Israel, Major General (USAF Retired)

Ken Israel is currently the Vice President for Strategy for Lockheed Martin Corporation. General Israel retired from the United States Air Force after a distinguished career in operations/maintenance and key acquisition assignments. Ken has over 2,000 hours of flight time, primarily in B-52G and EB-66 aircraft. He served at every level in the Air Force and also finished his career as the Director of the Defense Airborne Reconnaissance Office in 1998. General Israel was the Air Force Program Executive Officer for Command, Control & Communications Programs. He was also responsible for establishing the Office of Intelligence and Communications at Electronic System Center at Hanscom Air Force Base, Massachusetts. He served as the Inspector General for Air Force Systems Command. He also served as the Division Chief for Plans, Programs and Policy, Electronic Combat Systems, HQ USAF. He was awarded the Theodore Von Karman Award for Science & Engineering, the Defense Intelligence Agency Director's Award and the National Reconnaissance Office Director's Award. He has published numerous articles in ISR Magazine, Aviation Week & Space Technology and UAV on-line. Ken is an active member of the Defense Science Board Task Force. Ken lives in Clemmons North Carolina with his wife Annetta and son Kenny.